

Art Historian

We are looking for Art Historians at all career stages to join our team in Neuenhof. We welcome applications from trainees, recent graduates, and experienced professionals. What matters most is your passion for art, your curiosity, and your willingness to contribute.

Candidates should have an academic or practical background in Art History. Previous experience is not required, however an interest in the authentication, attribution, and certification of artworks is highly appreciated.

You will contribute to research, documentation, provenance analysis, and the preparation of high-quality written materials relating to artworks, artists, and collections.

Key responsibilities

- Conduct art historical research on artworks, artists, periods and artistic movements
- Support authentication, attribution, certification and provenance-related work
- Prepare clear and rigorous reports, certificates, catalogue entries and research documentation
- Analyse available documentation, archives, catalogues raisonnés and comparative references
- Collaborate with specialists, collectors, institutions and internal teams
- Contribute to the development of innovative research methods, digital tools and AI

Profile

- Degree in Art History or a closely related field
- Interest in art authentication, certification, provenance research or artwork documentation
- Strong knowledge of art history, major artists, artistic periods and movements
- Research, analytical and organisational skills
- Capacity to produce precise and professional documentation in several languages
- Fluency in English is essential; French, German, Italian or other languages are highly valued
- Interest in artificial intelligence, emerging technologies and their potential applications within the art world

This position is ideal for someone who combines rigorous academic knowledge with a forward-looking interest in how technology can support the study, documentation and preservation of art.

What We Offer

At FINAIS, employee satisfaction is a priority. We aim to create flexible and supportive working conditions adapted to individual needs, allowing each team member to perform at their best.

- Flexible working conditions adapted to the employee's needs and responsibilities
- A stimulating international environment at the intersection of art, research and emerging technologies
- Salary to be negotiated depending on experience, qualifications and professional background
- We take care of all insurance arrangements and work permit applications, where applicable.
- If relocation is required, we can assist with and arrange accommodation to ensure a smooth transition.
